1		Δ					4 21	4m 4	10a30		We are now, by the permission of heaven, arrived at the year 1785, wherein more work will be cutting out than the year will in all probability be likely to finish. 10 February hath XXVIII Days.

I sing the Queen, whose gracious Smile
 Strikes Pleasure through the British Isle;
 Oh may, for our dear Country's Sake,
 Her Sex by her a Pattern take;
 Till future Ages blefs the Day
 CHARLOTTE in England first bore Sway.

And you, sweet Babes of our great Head,
 Bless'd Offspring of the Marriage-Bed,

 And Bards record your future Praise;
 And when Death calls may you give Place
 Unto a long succeeding Race.

I sing of those who boldly broke
That horrid Bond, the Roman Yoke;
Who studying hard the Truth t' explore,
At length found out the Scarlet Whore;
And prov'd, by Revelation plain,
Her's was the Trap, and her's the Chain.

Mercury is still busy; with Jupiter he appears friendly, nor less so with Mars; with Sol he is in perfect harmony. I hope our capital may experience the benefits of benign aspects. I believe some unwelcome news from abroad begins to attract the listening ear, and may possibly be too true; but peace at home be the main endeavour of every lover of his country. The quartile of Mars and Venus bespeaks some disagreement betwixt us, and perhaps some we had rather be upon good terms with, but I hope no bad consequences in the end. This appears a very busy month, and in such a complication of various aspects, 'tis better to wait with silent expectation, than to determine too hastily.

I sing the saints and martyrs good,
In truth's defence who shed their blood;
Who, when deep clamour cry'd aloud
For blood, despis'd the hissing crowd:
Truth bade them, with their latest breath,
Despising life, rejoice in death.

1		*	$\odot$	$\odot$	*	*	2 34	6m 57	om 51	The sextiles of this month, together with the trines and conjunctions, seem to bespeak some harmony. Jupiter in conjunction with Mars bespeaks alliance; but very probably private preparations against future events. Mercury in close alliance with Venus , shifts presently to a trine with Saturn . More news than is true, and I fear more truth than is good for any thing. But let us not be too hasty in giving ear to first tidings; if fraught with truth in general, they often fail of the whole truth, and falsehood slips into the hiatus to make the story more probable. A lady of rank is likely to be forgot, and one of low birth will be exalted. Post est occasio calva.

 And this bless'd isle is plagu'd no more

1	*		♂			3 24	7 m 19	morn.	Various are the aspects of this month, and of various import: the plot thickens, and the whole stage is full of business. But what is passing behind the scenes would puzzle the greatest politician to unravel. Some news from a neighbouring country is daily expected, and the contents of it much feared; the restless daring genius of the same being seldom quiet. Interest is the grand motive; and while honesty is the cry, conscience slips aside to give way to convenience. But the drama is not confined to one spot; all nations, and kingdoms, and people, and tongues, seem more or less engaged; but, like the troubled ocean, the loud lashing billows may yet soon settle in a calm.

God good from evil can produce,
As bees extract from pois'nous juice
Balsamic honey: So when first
Old Harry wrote, and Luther curst,
Rome of this title gave a tender,
That Harry was the Faith's Defender.

But things were quickly alter'd quite,
And thou, O Pope, for once wert right;
Just was the sentence giv'n, when thou

But fairly said, him and his mate
Nothing but death should separate,

1	B	△				♈	10 32	10m 36	4m 9	The evil aspects of this month are more than the good ones; yet England , methinks, has not much to fear: where parties unite, what affects one affects all; but where interests divide, what is bad news in one place, is good in another. So, however the opposition of Jupiter and Sol may affect some parts, it will not apparently detriment us. Mars , however, is not dormant, nor yet appears to run to any degree of violence. Some losses by sea I expect about this time. A great man is in danger; the consequence as well as the cause will soon be known. Expect to hear of harm done by storms and hurricanes. Deus nobiscum.

28 NOVEMBER hath xxx Days.

Thus happily for this our nation,
Henry began a separation;
'Twas reformation call'd, to screen it,
Though so did not old Harry mean it:
But gracious Heav'n, with wise intent,
Frustrated all that Harry meant.

1	δ					δ	16 14	11m24	6m41	Nine various aspects are this month presented to view. Experience has told the sages of former days, that the favourable aspects of one month alleviate the cross ones of another; and no less a man than Solomon has observed, that what has been will be, and there is nothing new under the sun. The various configurations in the present month will rather confound the mental faculties than bring them to a settled determination. Much business appears to be stirring in the cabinets of the great, and much wonder and whispering among the lower sort; while he in whose hand are all the corners of the earth, orders all things according to his good pleasure.

And now, thank Heav'n, no more we need
For liberty of conscience plead;
But while from hence our comforts spring,
While George and Liberty we sing,
Heav'n grant each Briton so to use it,
As to enjoy, but not abuse it.

Some great man (short as the year is). appears as if he would not survive it; but whether he be in the ecclesiastical or civil line, I will not presume to say. Many are the disputes at this time; I pray God preserve us from religious ones. Kingdoms, like individuals, have their rise, their height, and their fall. Jam seges est ubi Troja fuit. God grant to us in this our day the blessing of peace; to this great end may the crown long flourish on the sacred head of him who now graces it, for the glory of Britain, and the prosperity of the Protestant church. Non nobis Domine, sed nomini tuo da gloriam. Amen.

Of the ECLIPSES that will happen in the Year 1785.

WITHIN the compass of the present year there will be but two Eclipses, both of the Sun, but neither of them visible to the inhabitants of our British isle. The first will be on the 9th of February about noon, and the other on the 5th of August about half past one in the morning. As neither the Eclipses nor their effects any way concern us, I shall only observe that the Sun will be eclipsed on the meridian, in about 7 degrees of West Longitude, and 14 degrees of South Latitude, for the first time. And the second will be on the meridian in Longitude 156 degrees East nearly, and 12 degrees North Latitude.

Although these two Eclipses of the grand luminary of day may not appear to concern us, yet in the course of the circling year we may possibly find a sufficient quantity of malign aspects in the planetary system to keep every wise man upon his guard.

This observation of a modern poet, whose name will live when even his very bones are mouldered into dust, is at once poetical and philosophical, viz.

All heart can wish for, all the joys of sense,
Lie in three words; health, peace, and competence.

I have often thought that this would make a good Motto to an Astrological Ephemeris; if any should wonder how and why, I will inform them. Well is it known that all the blessings of life, without health to enjoy them, are tasteless and insipid; insomuch, that the possessor of useless thousands, racked with pain, or loaded with surfeit, is to be pitied when compared with the child of rosy health. This being a fact which all must allow, how much is the considerate man beholden to Astrology, which by the various configurations of the starry messengers, foretells the disorders likely to afflict mortals in the different seasons and stages of life! Thus forewarned, they are forearmed; and by a diligent observation of the same, are qualified to arm against them; consequently to enjoy life, disappoint the doctor, save their pockets the expence of an apothecaries bill, and their stomachs the trouble of digesting many a nauseous potion. Proceed we next to peace. As to the greatest of blessing, internal peace, or that sweet serene rene peace of the mind which, next to the peace of God, passeth all understanding; that is certainly only to be gained by endeavouring to the utmost of our power to carry in our hearts a conscience void of offence towards God and towards men. But there is likewise an external peace, which can never be preserved in this transitory life for any continuance of time, without a knowledge of future events, or at least a shrewd guess at them. This concerns both mighty states and private families; here again our art in a particular manner affords her divine assistance, and by shewing the wise what is most likely to happen, puts it in their power either to prevent it, or guard against it. N. B. I say likely to happen; because, be it always remembered, that astra cogunt, non regunt. Lastly, as to competence; who knows not its virtues and charms? and what child of necessity makes not this his daily prayer, and the attainment of it his hourly endeavour? And what, you will perhaps say, will Astrology do for us in this affair?—Lay your hand to your heart, and ask yourself this simple question—Did I ever see a man in any kind of distress who cried not out, Ah! had I foreseen this or the other, matters would have been widely different from what they are, I had ere now been a rich or a happy man?—And, I pray now tell me, why did not he? The portals of our art were open to him; and if in the bright day of human learning a man will wilfully shut his eyes, and walk blindfold in the path of ignorance, if he falls into the pit of misfortune and dashes not out his brains, the reason is very evident, viz. because he has none.

Let who will then despise the wisdom and knowledge of our sapient forefathers, I will say, Hail! Art Cœlestial! Science Divine! whose chariot mounted upon the unerring wheels of Astronomy, traverses the heavens in search of science profound, and kindly communicatest thy intelligences to thy faithful votaries. And in this let every sensible man join me, since it so clearly appears to even the meanest capacity, that by this we may attain

All art can wish for, all the joys of sense,

Firm health, sweet peace, and happy competence.

Lastly, as the cœlestial influences do only incline, and not forcibly bind, that paradox which has troubled the wits

wits of thousands, is rendered intelligible even to the capacity of a child ; and it is in this light the poet is to be understood, when he sweetly in the following lines sings thus :

- “ Thou first great cause, least understood,
- “ Who all my sense confin’d,
- “ To know but this, that Thou art good,
- “ And that myself am blind:
- “ Yet gave me, in this dark estate,
- “ To know the good from ill ;
- “ And binding nature fast in fate,
- “ Left free the human will.”

Here we observe, that when this grand machine was put in motion, the first cause produced an effect ; that effect became the cause of another, and so on through the whole chain of being, every antecedent linked to its consequent. But where consequences were bad, the human will, directed by prudence and foresight, was free to reject the impulse, or if good to follow it. And for this foresight we are beholden to that divine art ASTROLOGY.

I proceed next to some observations upon the Romish Religion. My good and ingenious brother diarian, Mr. Moore, in his last year’s production, has mentioned the Catholics in very tender terms. I commend his moderation, it is truly Protestant, and bespeaks a heart truly good. Certainly to render evil for good is diabolical ; to render evil for evil is revengeful ; but to render good for evil is godlike ; but at the same time, for the sake of the unwary, I must put in a caveat. Let us be wise as serpents and harmless as doves ; heaven forbid we should imprison and cruelly commit to the flames any of them who are in our power, because their forefathers imprisoned and burned ours. It may be said they are not the cruel people they were in that day, but the detestable Irish massacre proves the contrary. But, say others, rolling years have changed the times, and constant communication with the meek and humble Protestants, has softened that rugged disposition, awakened each tender sensation, and opened a wide door for the reconciliation of all parties ; this is, I allow, truly Christian like, and shews a spirit of heavenly benevolence.

But

But let us beware; when the sheep made a league with the wolves, and gave their faithful guardians the dogs for hostages, they fell an easy prey to the enemy. And the horrid Inquisition stands this day as a proof that no power ought to be put in the hands of a Papist. I remember the great Selden somewhere proposes this question:—Why may not a Papist enjoy liberty of conscience to worship God after his own way as well as the Presbyterian, the Independant, the Anabaptist, the Quaker, or any other sect of the dissenting Protestants? His answer is this:—All other sects acknowledge and swear allegiance to the King, owning him only for supreme both in church and state; and all laws, as well ecclesiastic as civil, must have his sanction; which is indeed but barely just, as all our rights, all our liberties, in every department, demand his protection. A Catholic may swear allegiance, and with his lips make the same acknowledgement as the Protestant, but his heart is far from it, he is bound by his religion to acknowledge a head superior to him, Christ's Vicegerent the Pope, who carries the keys of heaven and hell; who loosens and no one can bind; who binds and no one shall loose. And if this be the case, as it certainly is, little faith is to be put in that man who to prove his allegiance has recourse to perjury.

I might here be expected to expose the corrupt tenets of that church, particularly that of transubstantiation; but as it is too ridiculous to reason upon, it can only be a fit subject for satire. And no where can I find words better adapted to this purpose than in the following lines of the ingenious Oldham, which take as follow:

But nothing with the crowd does more advance
The value of these holy Chartelans,
Than when the wonders of the mass they view,
When holy jugglers their chief mastery shew.
Hey, jingo, Sirs! What's this? 'Tis bread you see;
Presto, be gone! 'Tis now a Deity.
Two grains of dough, with cross and stamp of priest,
And five small words pronounc'd make up their Christ.
To this they all fall down, this all adore,
And strait devour what they ador'd before;
Down goes the tiny Saviour at a bit,
To be digested, and at length befit -

From altar to clofestoole or jakes prefer'd,
First wafer, next a god, and then a t——

What will add to the consternation of every Protestant reader, is the manner in which they spend the Sabbath after mass is over. I will give one instance from Dr. Burney's Travels into Germany, the Netherlands, and United Provinces.

The scene is Vienna; he observes that the barbarous spectacles underwritten, are usually attended by two or three thousand people, among which are a great number of ladies. But, says he, the most exact and least suspicious description I can give of these diversions, will be literally to translate a hand bill, such as is distributed through the streets every Sunday and festival, as follows:

“ This day, by imperial licence, in the Great Amphitheatre, at five o'clock, will begin the following diversions.

“ 1st. A wild Hungarian ox in full fire (i. e. fire under his tail, and crackers fastened to his ears and horns, and other parts of his body) will be set upon by dogs.

“ 2d. A wild boar will in the same manner be baited by dogs.

“ 3d. A great bear will, immediately after, be torn by dogs.

“ 4th. A wolf will be hunted by dogs of the fleetest kind.

“ 5th. A very furious and enraged wild bull from Hungary will be attacked by fierce and hungry dogs.

“ 6th. A fresh bear will be attacked by hounds.

“ 7th. Will appear a fierce wild boar, just caught, which will now be baited for the first time by dogs defended with iron armour.

“ 8th. A beautiful African tyger.

“ 9th. This will be changed for a bear.

“ 10th. A fresh and fierce Hungarian ox.

“ 11th and lastly, A furious hungry bear, which has had no food for eight days, will attack a young wild bull, and eat him alive upon the spot; and if he is unable to complete the business, a wolf will be ready to help him.”

I sincerely believe an English Papist would shudder at such a sight, and detest so barbarous a diversion, but here you see the indulgences of Popery in its full growth. Proceed we now to the Seasons.

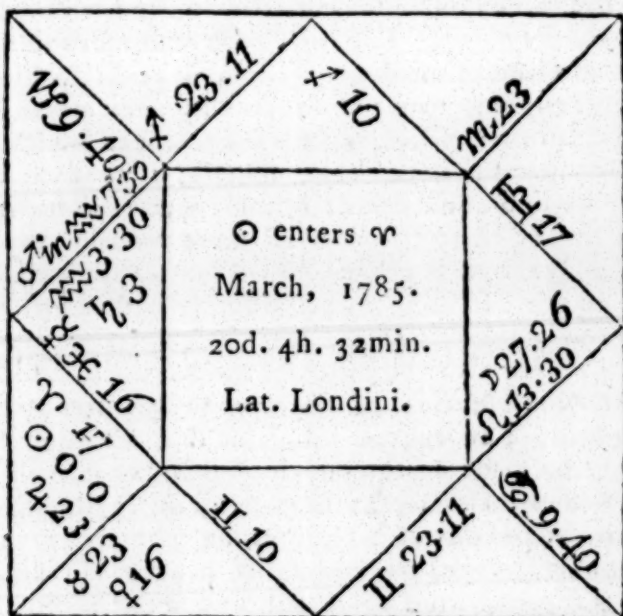

THE WINTER QUARTER, 1785,

COMMENCES December the 21st. at 58 minutes after 2 in the afternoon, ☉ enters ♊, but it is not his house, neither hath he any exaltation therein. ♃ in ♋, but there she has neither house, exaltation, triplicity, terms, face, detriment, or fall. ♄ in ♊ is in the same condition with ♃. ♀ in ♎ has somewhat in her behalf, but very trifling; the main affair in her behalf is, she has neither fall or detriment. ♂ in ♋ is very nearly in the same case as ♀. ♀ in ♋ appears to have some power, and ♃ in ♊ full as much. From the whole I humbly conceive that this will not be a very active season. ♂ has nothing now to do but in councils, there to stir up the restless minds to war and bloodshed. I heartily wish that sedition may not put on the face of patriotism, while hypocrisy, under the mask of religion, seems to support it. Enemy as I am to tyranny, monarchy has, within the terms in which we enjoy it, no greater friend than myself; it is necessary always to be upon our guard, but not always to be fighting. Across the Atlantic I apprehend more vexation than here. The East Indies will I think afford matter for speculation; and some news from thence is ardently wished for. Rome is apparently pretty quiet, I pray God keep her so; let her content herself with the mischief she has done, and lay her down to rest. ♀ is in ♋ wherein he has some dignity, and no fall. I apprehend from this that whatever opposition may be made by the people, our Monarch will be safe on the throne; and I pray God Almighty to preserve him here, and at the day of his dissolution take him to his forefathers, now (I hope) triumphant in heaven. Two aspects of the malignant kind bespeak no good to the female sex; some lady of distinction leaves the world, and I think some others unhappily will let their reputation slip out of the world before them, and leave them behind to grapple with shame and disgrace. Happy the merchant whose goods are safe in port, for Neptune and Æolus uniting their powers threaten imminent danger to the wanderers in the great deep. Expect some discontent and uneasiness among the common people; perhaps part may be owing to dissensions among their superiors; and a game at politics is in some measure much like a game at cards, there appears much much cutting and shuffling in both ; honours are nothing, and the world seems bent upon getting up by tricks. And part of our disturbances, I apprehend, may be owing to different sentiments in religious matters.

OF THE SPRING QUARTER,

WHICH this year commences on the 20th day of March, at 32 minutes past 4 in the morning when the Sun touches the first scruple of the cœlestial sign Aries; distributing equal portions of day and night to the inhabitants of this terrestrial globe. The position of the heavens at this crisis will appear from the following scheme.

Benedicite stellæ cœli Domino, laudate et super exaltare eum in sæcula.

There is neither speech nor language where their voice is not heard among them. To be brief, yet as accurate as possible, we will proceed with the greatest caution. In the above scheme we have 13 deg. 30 min. of the watry ♊ ascending, and 10 deg. of the fiery ♈ culminating. The position of the planets are properly adjusted in the scheme, and a proper judgment to be passed, the main article remaining. Here if I could proceed, cum privilegio et gratia majestatis divinæ, I might unfold such things as might fix the the attention of the greatest potentates; but I boast no such intelligence; multi multa sciunt, sed nemo omnia. I shall only, from authors of antiquity, modestly give my humble opinion; I foretell not pestilence and famine, war and bloodshed, yet methinks faction and discord will spread their dire effects over many nations. God send that instead of terminating in blood and fire, it may evaporate in a vapour of smoke. Business however seems to go forward more in the cabinet than in the field; news of various kinds about this time disturb the breast of many a politician, who if he could extricate all groundless hopes and needless fears might rest in peace. Agriculture, I really hope, will appear in a flourishing condition, and the prospect of a future sufficiency of life's necessities will, I hope, comfort the needy poor; and may no soul monopolies blast their hopes. In fine, I discover nothing in reality which need much disturb our peace; however there is peace within which it is in our own power to keep, and which family discords, city dissensions, the menaces of tyrants, nor the rage of nations can ever affect; to effect this let every one amend one, so shall be peace in our day, and the sons of Britain sing the song of joy.

OF THE SUMMER QUARTER.

UPON the arrival of the bright charioteer at the tropical sign of ♊ , in his annual peregrination commenceth the welcome Summer, which this year will be on the 21st day of June, at half past two in the morn, or somewhat more; when 6 deg. of ♊ ascend, and 12 deg. of ♋ are in the medium cæli. ♂ in ♋ portends good to England; I pray heaven grant our great council of the nation firmness and unanimity; may our armies be inspired with courage, and our fleets with strength. If I should prognosticate of divers commotions, designs, disappointments, &c. I believe you will find it but too true. Yet think not the British dominions alone involved, perhaps she may be the least. The contagion spreads in my opinion over the greatest part of Europe, nor are other more distant dominions without their difficulties. Yet may the cloud of despondency be blown over, and the sweet sunshine of amity disperse the dark shade of public and private animosity. Te rogamus audi nos Domine.

THE

OF THE AUTUMNAL QUARTER.

THIS Quarter commences on the 22d of September, about a quarter past 4 in the evening, the Sun then entering once more upon the Æquatorial Line, and verging upon the celestial Balance; at which time 12 deg. of π ascend, and 7 deg. of Π culminate. The position of the heavens, and the various mutations of aspects, seem only to continue what I have already hinted at, and the year appears to conclude as it began. Peace to the peace makers; hurt be to the fraudulent.

— *Neque enim lex æquior ulla,
Quam necis artifices arte perire sua.*

Thus have I finished my predictions for the present year. If I have said any thing foreboding ill to my native country, I am heartily sorry; sure I am I spoke in sincerity, and be it remembered astra cogunt, non regunt. For the sins of the people the land mourneth; but yet there is balm in Gilead; there is a never-failing remedy recorded in the book of life. Let the wicked man turn away from his sins, and the unrighteous man from his evil ways, and call upon the Lord and he will have mercy upon him; let him cry mightily unto our God for he will abundantly pardon him. For a notable example of which, he who is the same yesterday, to-day, and for ever, has left many records in the sacred writings. Yet forty days and Ninevah shall be destroyed. These were the words of the Prophet Jonah, and to him disclosed by the spirit of everlasting truth; yet what was the conclusion of the whole matter? Why, we read in the last of the third chapter, that God saw their works, that they turned from their evil way, and God repented of the evil that he said he would do unto them, and he did it not. Finally, my brethren, love all men, especially those of the household of faith; for me, I sincerely pray God to bless every Roman Catholic in the British dominions, who holds his profession in the sincerity of his heart. May they every one enjoy their lives and properties uninterrupted, but never more molest us in the Christian liberty in which we walk.
